Hooray!!!!
It's finally here!!!

What better way to start off your New Year than with the 2017 Software Craftsmanship Calendar?

We know you just couldn't wait to receive this fantastic collection of software craftsmanship wisdom, all packaged up neatly in a small digital bundle. (No additional wrapping needed!) Here are all of the amazing images from our 2017 edition (many of which appeared in previous editions of the calendar that you may have missed), as well as a bunch of bonus images from previous years - our New Year's gift to you.

And not a moment too soon! We know there is that developer that you work with that REALLY NEEDS to make a New Year's Resolution about getting out of (technical) debt. Teach the team a lesson (right after the holiday season) by sharing an image of a fist full of credit cards and a bunch of overdue bills! Who wouldn't love that?

And speaking of sharing, you are welcome to share these images with others in things like presentations but we do ask that you please remember that they are not for redistribution, resale, repackaging, or any other purpose prohibited in the licensing agreement. (Sorry – it's hard to make several pages of legalese sound fun. But seriously, do respect the licensing agreement and please contact us if you have any questions.)

Once again, on behalf of the entire Software Craftsmanship Calendar Team, thank you for supporting our Kickstarter and for making this year's calendar a reality (in this case a virtual one). We really couldn't have done this without you.

The Software Craftsmanship Calendar Team

PS.

If you didn't order a printed copy of the calendar, or if you need some additional stocking stuffers (for people with large, square feet), you can order them at https://store.deviq.com/.

Shameless Self Promotion:

We've done a major upgrade of DevIQ! In addition to all of the calendar reference material, we are now offering short solution videos and full length courses to help you become the best developer you can be. Check out DevIQ.com for more resources to help you upgrade your brain today!